A TOWN IN THE AISNE, France, Dec. 15.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—A little battle grave-yard, the ruins of a village, the shattered remains of a once thriving town, the picturesque pile of gun-wrecked ruins, the hill was shot to pieces in the Germans' victorious fight for its possession.

The town of Cerny, in the Aisne, France, is a picturesque pile of gun-wrecked ruins. The hill was shot to pieces in the Germans' victorious fight for its possession.

Bank Clerk Screamed "They'll Kill Us All" When Germans Charged, but He Became a Good Soldier Afterward

BY HERBERT CORRY.
(Copyright, 1915, by Herbert Corry.)
LONDON, Dec. 15.—This is the confession of a coward. For reasons which seem quite sufficient the coward shall remain anonymous. Only this much may be told of his identity. He is an officer in one of the British territorial regiments. He is not more than twenty-three years old, and is slender, blue-eyed, and rather tall. He is a bank clerk, and his left arm is in a sling, because of a bullet through his shoulder.

"An officer of Hussars told me in Berlin," he said, "that courage is the most common human quality. He said we are all brave, and only know it when the test comes." "What awful rot," said the officer of territorial regiments, indignantly. "We all think it at first when we go to the front. I know I did. Every man I talked to told me the same thing."

He and his men were all merrily innocent when they were ordered out. He didn't precisely know why any of them had joined the territorial regiments. It was for a tank, he thought vaguely. None of them thought that war would really come. That was more than a year ago. When war came they were worried, but they felt they couldn't well be doing anything else.

"We used to chip each other," said he, "but we didn't like the prospect. I've told awake nights thinking about it. The British line in France needed reinforcement. The territorial regiments were called upon because there were no more professional soldiers available. He felt the regular army officers rather disapproved of them at first they were kept in the rear, guarding depots and lines of communication, and keeping out of the way of men who had real work to do. He couldn't remember that he felt at all humiliated by this.

"You see, we used to see the wounded as they were sent back to the hospitals," he said, half in explanation. "We saw the wounded as they were sent back to the hospitals."

WINN THE
There came a sudden pinch, and the territorial regiments were hurried forward. They didn't know the battle, but not in it. All around them troops were being fired on, but for some reason they were not fired on. They sat very low down in their trenches, although they were not in the way. That night they saw their first dead man—merrily killed, that is.

"Half a dozen men of my company were very sick," said he, "and they were sweating. It seemed that every face was covered with great beads of sweat. I put my hand to my forehead. I brought it away with a gasp. The collar of my tunic was black with it." The next day they moved on. The German army had been driven back, but no more of the company were sick. They were still very pale, but they were steady. The officer put his hand up to his forehead. Then came an awful thing. He saw a wounded man lie to his feet and stagger. He kept his left arm pressed across his middle. Twenty yards from the trench he stopped, and he fell to his side. He had been cut across the stomach by a fragment of shrapnel. He was dead.

THEY WERE
"We were at the right of the charge," said he. "I thought at first they were cowardly. Then I saw that they were. They were a tremendous swarm of them. Our gun opened fire, and they came very fast, but there was something grotesque and inevitable about it. I got into a position where I could see the fifth man from the lieutenant in the line. The lieutenant was called away from the slow moving, irresistible wave of Germans by a wild yell. He looked about just in time to see the first man to climb over the trench. "They'll kill us all," he heard the lieutenant shout. "They'll kill us all."

The lieutenant leaped toward him. He was a former banker was scrambling out of the trench. He was a former banker was scrambling out of the trench. He was a former banker was scrambling out of the trench.

Reply to U. S. Note on Interference With American Shipping Said to Be Wholly Conciliatory

PURCHASE OF GERMAN VESSELS NOT OPPOSED

Great Britain Wishes, to Do Everything to Protect Trade That Is Consistent With Allies' Interests

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, Dec. 15.—Great Britain's reply to the United States note on interference with American shipping, it is said in well informed quarters, is wholly conciliatory and shows a disposition to do everything within reason to avert the delay of cargoes.

England wishes to do everything in its power consistent with the safety of its own shipping, to facilitate world trade and stimulate commerce. Consequently, it is declared, there is no disposition on England's part to protest against the purchase of German vessels by Americans where the sales are genuine and the ships are not used so as to avoid what might reasonably be called consequences of belligerency.

Use of transferred German ships in cotton trade with Germany probably would call forth objections from the allies, although cotton is not contraband, because the allies, it is said, would regard such use as a roundabout means of carrying on war's commerce.

At any rate objection is not likely to come until ships are actually transferred and their prospective use is clearly indicated. It is probable the allies will take the time to make the money that will be paid until the time that it is a guarantee that it will not be of use to belligerents.

An assurance that German ships purchased by the United States government for its own use would not be used in the American trade probably would satisfy the allies.

While it is pointed out that the sale of German ships to the United States government would not be a violation of the American government's policy of not interfering with German trade, it is pointed out that the sale of German ships to the United States government would not be a violation of the American government's policy of not interfering with German trade.

American Cotton Ship Held up in Mine Field
(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, Dec. 15.—The American ship Carolyn, from Boston December 14 with cotton for Bremen, has been held up here because of the refusal of the local gulls to risk navigating the mine field.

Captain Mitchell is going to take his ship up the Lister Channel in the hope of picking up a pilot who will take him into Bremen.

Eastern End of German Line Being Pushed Back at Various Places, According to Paris Official Statement

GERMANS, HOWEVER, HOLD FRENCH BACK IN ALSACE
In Poland, Berlin Announces, German Advance Is Being Continued Toward Warsaw, but Details Are Lacking

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The French war office asserts the eastern end of the German line is being pushed backward at various places. In today's official statement mention is made of an important advance in the Woivre district, resulting in the capture of the two towns of the German front line. An advance in this district, if continued, might threaten the German wedge in the French line which reaches southward to St. Mihiel.

In Upper Alsace, also, the forward movement of the French is being continued. The German war office, however, asserts that French attacks in Alsace were repulsed.

Beyond the German statement that the advance in Poland is being continued slowly, there were few new details of the eastern campaign.

The German military government of Belgium denied officially the report of the arrest at Brussels of Cardinal Mercier, and said that the cardinal was still in Belgium.

An official Turkish announcement makes no mention of the invasion of the Russian border. It is said that the Turkish forces which invaded the Caucasus had not yet reached the Russian border.

Activity of German's Zeppelin along the Russian border has been reported as to a possible raid on England. Several of the dirigibles were reported to have been seen in the English Channel.

COUPLE SURPRISE FRIENDS BY ANNOUNCING WEDDING

Miss Myrtle Moore Became Mrs. C. E. Singleton Wednesday Evening

Stealing away with eluding's suitcase, procuring a wedding license in a downpour of rain, taking a girl ostensibly to church, but in reality to the altar, and then calling up her friends to inform the folks she won't be back any more because she's married now—these were the exciting incidents which occurred when Miss Myrtle Moore became Mrs. C. E. Singleton Wednesday evening.

And the astonishing part is that there wasn't any reason for it at all. They just wanted to make it a surprise wedding, and they did, so surprising, in fact, that Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moore, of Chamblee, Ga., will have no inkling whatever of their daughter's marriage until they read today's Journal.

The wedding had been planned since Christmas by the young people. All the time was looking for the opportunity, moment, or rather, moments.

On Tuesday evening, when Mr. Singleton, who had been called to his home at his residence, 172 Crumley street, suddenly abandoned with the young lady's suitcase while members of the family, with the exception of Miss Moore herself, were blissfully unaware of it.

Opportunity moment No. 2 came Wednesday night when Mr. Singleton, who had traveled the rain that morning to get the license, called again on Miss Moore and told everybody they were going to prayer meeting at the Second Baptist church, of which they are both members.

They did so to church, but they arrived there just fifteen minutes before the service was to start, and were quietly married by the pastor, Dr. John White. And then, instead of returning to Crumley street, they followed the highway to their own home at 32 Grand street and from there telephoned the news of the marriage to Miss Moore—garden. Mrs. Singleton—friends. Today both Mr. and Mrs. Singleton are receiving the warmest congratulations from all sides.

RECORDER'S COURT IS NO BOND COLLECTING AGENCY

Judge Johnson Refuses to Return to Bondsman $10 Forfeited

That the recorder's court is no collecting agency for bondsmen, was the assertion of Judge George E. Johnson, Thursday morning, when I. C. Clark, a professional bondsman, tried to get the court to refund the amount of a bond which had been forfeited after Clark had recaptured the fugitive.

The case was one of disorderly conduct docketed against Charles Daniel, a negro, on October 24. Clark went to the court to get the bond, but the bond was forfeited. Recently Clark caught the negro and turned him over to the police. He was tried Thursday morning before the recorder, Judge Johnson, and remanded to jail, which had already been forfeited in the case, decided $5.75 additional should be imposed.

Clark protested that his forfeited bond should be returned to him, and the court collect the $5.75 from the negro. The court refused.

NEGRO DRIVER IS HELD FOR ROBBING THE MAIL

Literally caught with the goods, Ollie Saxon, negro driver of a mail wagon, confessed to robbing the mails of parcel post matter, and was Thursday committed to jail in default of $100 bail by United States Commissioner W. Colquitt Carter.

Inspectors found a large quantity of stolen goods at Saxon's house, and what was not found there Saxon confessed to have pawned. Among the stolen articles were an Elgin watch, with silver case upon which were the initials "J. S.," a "moerschbaum" pipe, women's clothes and shoes, and a suitcase which Saxon declared was used to deal cards in a crooked game. He protested, however, that this contrivance was not stolen.

HAD SAME COUGH FOR SEVERAL YEARS

Woman Fifty Years Old—Coughed More or Less Since Childhood—Found No Relief Until She Got Vinol.

Dayton, Ohio—"I want everybody to know what Vinol has done for me. I am now fifty years old and ever since I was a young girl I have had a cough most of the time, and sick headaches which left me weak and with no desire for food.

"I took all kinds of medicines but nothing seemed to do me any good. Finally my druggist asked me to try Vinol, saying that if it did not help me he would refund my money. I felt so much better after taking one bottle I bought more. Now my cough is entirely cured. I have no more sick headaches. I have a good appetite and feel better than I ever did in my life, and I cannot recommend Vinol too highly."

—Mrs. J. C. Schneider, Dayton, Ohio.

Vinol is not a secret nostrum, simply a combination of the medicinal elements found in nature, together with iron, contains no oil and is delicious tasting. We seek evidence from chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, and every run-down person to try Vinol.

GERMANS DENY REPORT OF ARREST OF CARDINAL

Rumor Doubtful at Vatican, but Pope Benedict Makes Inquiry

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The German military government of Belgium has issued an official denial of the report that Cardinal Mercier, the Belgian member of the Sacred college, has been arrested by the German authorities.

Cardinal Mercier was reported unofficially to have been arrested on account of a pastoral letter in which he was said to have advised Belgian civilians not to recognize the authority of the German administration of Belgium. While these reports were doubted at the Vatican, an inquiry was instituted by Pope Benedict, with the idea of protesting to the German government, according to Rome dispatches, should the reported arrest be verified.

ENGLAND'S FOREIGN TRADE IS HARD HIT BY WAR

LONDON, Jan. 7.—War's effect on England's foreign trade was strikingly shown in the yearly returns of the board of trade announced today. Exports in 1914 amounted to more than $175,000,000, as compared with the preceding year. Imports decreased more than $25,000,000.

POSTOFFICE RECEIPTS INDICATE BUSINESS BOOM

General Business for January Up to Wednesday Better Than 1914

Signs of business betterment are reflected in the condition of postoffice business, according to Postmaster Jones.

The receipts for January up to Wednesday night were ahead of the corresponding period last year, he said, and he added that another indication was the mailing of advertising matter, which was now coming into the post-office for the first time in four or five months.

"When you consider that the business of the postoffice last January was exceptionally good, the increase this year is all the more gratifying," said Mr. Jones. "That merchandise and other business men are again sending advertising matter through the mails, which until now had not been the case in four or five months, is another indication of betterment in business."

Mr. Jones added that from what he could gather from banks and business concerns, the conditions were a great deal better. He noted an improvement in the employment situation.

"I expect to see an improvement about February 1," Mr. Jones said, "but it is showing itself a month earlier than I had expected."

COMB SAGE TEA IN LIFELESS, GRAY HAIR

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully dressed, glossy and abundant with a few drops of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out of lock on that old, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Weyb's Sage and Sulphur compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair. A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Weyb's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—(Adv.)

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

By Thomas W. Bagen

Juniper the hare had been out all night. He had travelled far and wide through the Green Forest, as his name was, and now he was tired. The Jolly Little Hare was beginning to dance through the Green Forest and to bed himself comfortably under a bent branch in the most lonesome spot of the Green Forest and prepared to go to sleep. Now at all times Juniper is a very light sleeper. He is very timid, and he trusts wholly to his long ears to take him out of danger. When he takes a nap it is crowded down in a position to run at the first hint of danger.

It seemed to him that hardly had he closed his eyes this time when a flash of light started him so that he almost jumped. He realized that there was no danger. He looked up. There was Blacky the Crow in the tree over his head.

"I've been looking for you," said Blacky.

"Well, now you've found me," replied Juniper rather shortly, "what can I do for you?"

"You can tell me what Buster Bear is doing," said Blacky.

"How should I know?" returned Juniper. "Buster Bear knows his own business and mind mine. Probably he's asleep."

"You mean just taking a nap?" asked Blacky eagerly.

"No, Buster doesn't sleep. He's just taking a time of rest. Probably he's asleep for the winter. He ought to be where he is," replied Juniper.

"Everybody doesn't know it, either," returned Blacky. "I had heard it, but I didn't believe it, and I don't believe it now."

"Don't you see," replied Juniper testily. "He just does what he likes. If I knew how I'd do it myself."

"But where is he?" persisted Blacky.

"I don't know and I don't care. Didn't you see that I'm not in a mood to talk to you?"

Juniper was cross and his face showed it.

Blacky saw that he could find out nothing more and flew away. Once more Juniper closed his eyes and just as he was about to do so when a harsh voice awoke him with a start. This time it was Sammy Jay and Sammy was just as full of questions about Buster Bear as Blacky the Crow.

Juniper just couldn't be cross to Tommy Tit, so he told him just what he had said to Blacky the Crow. Tommy Tit was only too glad to be a part of the conversation. Tommy Tit thanked him and hurried away.

"I hope that is the last one," muttered Juniper, and closed his eyes once more.

But Tommy wasn't the last one. Drummer the Woodpecker called on him once more. So did Mrs. Grosbeak, and all of Peter Rabbit's friends. Just as he began to wish that Buster Bear never had come to the Green Forest.

It was for the life of him he couldn't understand why everybody was so surprised that Buster Bear should be asleep. All winter, you see, he had known Buster and his ways so long that it didn't seem a bit queer to him. Often he had envied Buster because he could sleep all winter and never move then right on.

He yawned as Peter Rabbit hurried away, then settled himself for one last try to get that nap he so needed. He was asleep almost as soon as he closed his eyes, and he was no one waked him. Everybody was too busy trying to find the place where Buster Bear had gone to bed for the winter.

THEATERS

Friday and Saturday, with matinees each day, "Bought and Paid For" will be played at the Atlanta. This George Broadhurst play is one of the most thrilling ever staged and deals with a subject which strikes both men and women. It shows the true stages which self-indulgence develops and becomes a perfect picture of the drunk and his danger to himself and his family. Specially strong is the drinking scene when the wife attempts to escape from the husband while he is drunk. As she locks herself in her room he cries "I bought and paid for you," and smashes the door to her room in a frenzy of drunken anger. Seats are now selling for all four performances, the matinees being arranged at 50 cents for the best seats in order that all women may see the play.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with a Wednesday matinee, the Atlanta will offer "Today," again, the play returning with the same fine company seen here a few weeks ago.

There is being shown at the Grand Theatre, for the first time in the south, the prize-winning comedy "Without Hope," which won the $5,000 prize offered by the New York Morning Telegraph for the best motion picture scenario producing at least 1,000 laughs. It is in four reels and was produced by an all-star company headed by Fred Macfe. There are 250 laughs in each reel. This was one of the stipulations in the contest and it surely was lived up to by the author, Elaine Stanger.

RECEPTION IS PLANNED FOR NATHAN STRAUS

New York Philanthropist May Be Chamber of Commerce Guest in April

A committee of directors from the chamber of commerce called on Nathan Straus at the Georgian Terrace Wednesday evening and asked him to be the guest of the chamber at a reception to be given in his honor.

Mr. Straus was greatly pleased with the courtesy extended by the chamber of commerce and will probably accept the invitation in the event that he returns to the city early in April, as he hopes to do.

This action was taken by the directors at their meeting Wednesday afternoon, when C. T. Laddie brought to the attention of the board the fact that Mr. Straus was a visitor to the city.

Mr. Laddie paid a beautiful tribute to Mr. Straus as a philanthropist who had done a great deal to make the world better by having lived in it.

Albert Howell, Jr., moved that a committee of three directors wait on Mr. Straus and arrange for a reception in his honor. The motion was unanimously adopted and P. K. Weyels, J. R. A. Hobson and Walter Rich were appointed.

These gentlemen were immediately to the Georgian Terrace, where they had a very pleasant interview with Mr. Straus, who was very much pleased with the courtesy extended and explained that it was too late for him to defer his departure for New Orleans Thursday, but that he might, and probably would, return to Atlanta in April and in that event would be very glad to meet the members of the chamber in their building and talk to them about the work that he was very much interested in and spend a great deal of money improving the mills supply of New York City.

EATONTON MERCHANT ENDS LIFE WITH POISON

Oscar Jarmulowski Tells of His Intentions Day Before He Kills Himself

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)—EATONTON, Ga., Jan. 7.—Oscar Jarmulowski, a prominent dry goods merchant here more than ten years, last night ended his life by taking poison Thursday morning.

He told his clerk and bookkeeper Wednesday of his intentions, giving business directions and the place of burial desired. Efforts to dissuade were thought successful.

Last night he occupied an upstairs room, stating that he desired a good resting place for better feeling in future.

Straus received a telegram from New York stating that 2,468 babies were fed free of charge at his milk depot in the city early in April, as he hopes to do.

This action was taken by the directors at their meeting Wednesday afternoon, when C. T. Laddie brought to the attention of the board the fact that Mr. Straus was a visitor to the city.

While the committee was present Mr. Laddie moved that the chamber of commerce call on Mr. Straus at the Georgian Terrace Wednesday evening and ask him to be the guest of the chamber at a reception to be given in his honor.

The motion was unanimously adopted and P. K. Weyels, J. R. A. Hobson and Walter Rich were appointed.

These gentlemen were immediately to the Georgian Terrace, where they had a very pleasant interview with Mr. Straus, who was very much pleased with the courtesy extended and explained that it was too late for him to defer his departure for New Orleans Thursday, but that he might, and probably would, return to Atlanta in April and in that event would be very glad to meet the members of the chamber in their building and talk to them about the work that he was very much interested in and spend a great deal of money improving the mills supply of New York City.
